SCME191 Ymateb gan: | Response from: Unigol / Individual

I am totally against increasing the size of the Senedd to 96 members. This is ridiculous, Wales is a small country, the present number, 60, is more than enough. They should work harder, or move over so that others can take their place. They should have less holidays and less pay, to see whether they can at last understand and respect their electors. With the country in such a dire situation, it would be nothing less than a travesty for money to be spent on this vanity project.

I am also vehemently against changing the election system so that we vote for parties and not for individuals. This will end Members' accountability to their electors and is unacceptable. Why should we accept party stooges representing us. People want to vote for individuals of their choice, not some thickos pushed by parties.

I write as an individual voter, not on behalf of any organisation. I am a graduate with a higher degree. I do not mind my comments being published, but do not want my name to be used. Thank you.
